- 1. On 12 January 1954, Yugoslav soldiers moved out of private homes in the vicinity of the Austrian customs station at Bonisdorf (in Jennesdorf), Austria, and the frontier crossing point of Matjasevel, in the Murska Sobota district of Slovenia, Yugoslavia. The majority of these men are presently quartered in small barracks of new construction located in the Matjasovel area. The barracks are situated approximately 500 meters from the Yugoslav-Austrian frontier, whereas the former dwellings are located immediately at the border.
- 2. When they moved, the Yugoslav soldiers took with them the sentry box which stood outside their former quarters near the Bonisdorf customs roadhouse. At present, during periods when the Yugoslav border crossing point is officially open, it is occupied by members of the Yugoslav militia.
